Market Review

U.S Treasury ("UST") yields eased in May as growing concerns on recession begun to gain traction, inducing some reevaluation on inflation and monetary policy tightening. Consequently, the short to belly UST curve shifted lower by 9 to 16bps while the long end yield surged by 5bps MoM. This was a reversal from levels observed earlier in the month which saw the Fed raising interest rate by 50bps coupled with expectations that more aggressive hikes may be impending to tame inflation. Yield on the 10Y UST reached 3.19%, the highest since November 2018 as a result of such expectations. However, towards the end of the month, lacklustre economic data and worries that aggressive interest hike may dent economic activities have led to heightened concerns that a recession could be on the horizon. Such worries which resulted in some flight to safe haven assets coupled with receded expectations of an aggressive hike, led to yields climbing down with the 10Y UST settling at 2.84% as at end May.

On the local front, relatively similar trend was observed in govies yield as it continued to track the trend in the US. The yields on the 3-, 5-, 10-, 15- and 30-year MGS compressed by 6, 18, 17, 31 and 16bps MoM, respectively. The central bank opted to raise interest rates by 25bps to the surprise of many and was deemed rather pre-emptive. However, the strong economic momentum as reflected by a 5% GDP growth in 1Q2022 coupled with concerns on rising food prices stemming from supply chain issues and geopolitical conflict does give credence to the central bank's decision. In the week of the hike, the 10Y MGS was hovering at around 4.45% but has since retracted, taking cue from global concerns of an impending recession should the US fail to deliver on a soft landing. The ensuing demand for safe haven assets led to a decline in yields with the 10Y MGS settling at 4.19% as at end May 2022.

In the corporate bond segment, some prominent new issuances during the month were Imtiaz Sukuk II Berhad (RM1.5 billion, AA2), Cagamas Berhad (RM725 million, AAA), and Tanjung Bin Energy Sdn Bhd (RM710 million, AA3).

Outlook & Strategy

The UST is likely to be influenced by the Fed's tone with regards to necessary policy actions to tame inflation while not precipitating a recession. Close attention will be paid to economic data such as job market reports and economic growth indicator to gauge the likelihood of a recession emerging. On the flipside, still raging inflation could lead the Fed to aggressively utilize its monetary policy tools to combat inflation despite the possibility of slowing economic growth.

Domestically, yield movement will likely be influenced by developments over in the US, particularly with regards to the possibility of a recession. On a fundamental level, the economic momentum post transition to then endemic from 1st April seems to be encouraging. We will however continue to monitor relevant economic data which could induce significant risk off sentiments. Our strategy is to nibble on low risk assets when opportunity arises and buying selectively in private debt securities to achieve higher return.
